We Must Fight
To Keep The Independence We Celebrate July 4

In 1776 our forefathers created Independence Day on the 4th of July and by severing all ties with the mother country of England, a new and free nation was born and a type of government was brought forth and dedicated to an idea of Freedom which had never been thought possible. Now for 165 years America has lived under that form of Government and we have been privileged to enjoy the blessings of that Freedom won for us back in 1776.

Now we are not only celebrating this great day again tomorrow, but in the year 1941 we are forced to fight to keep that Independence we won away back in the early days of America's life as a nation.

for today there are men and forces at work to destroy our Independence and make us colonies of a foreign power.

In 1941 we should learn to sever ties with all European entanglements and keep our Independence by being for America first, last and always. We should aid humanity and work for world peace instead of stirring up flames of aid and aiding nations who have proven to be wenchers and do not appreciate what we have done for them in the past.

We must keep America absolutely Independent of European matters if we hope to celebrate Independence Day on the 4th of July's in the years to come.

Nation's Farmers Study New Plans to Improve Economic and Social Welfare

By FRANK GEORGE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THE place is Caswell County, North Carolina. Or Ross County, Ohio. Or Adair County, Iowa. Or any one of fifteen hundred other counties where land use planning is under way. Coming up from the people on the land in more than seven thousand communities are recommendations for improving physical, economic, and social conditions—beginning at the grass roots and working up through county, state and national research and action agencies.

Land use planning this new development is called, and it means just that, as farmers all over the nation are actively engaged in planning the use of land in relation to their economic and social well being. Co-operating in this work are the agricultural colleges and the various research and action agencies of the federal department of agriculture.

A few years ago the idea that farmers themselves should take such an active part in the development of agricultural programs was philosophy. Today farmers the country over are critically studying problems such as soil erosion, rural zoning, tax delinquency, farm tenancy and the like. Local agricultural programs dealing with these and related subjects are being made a part of county and state programs, and ultimately will be woven into the fabric of national agricultural conservation and adjustment.

Look in upon a typical community meeting of farmers and multiply this scene by the more than 7,000 communities where land use planning is under way. Spread out on the tables are maps, charts and reports showing how the land is being used, the way in which it has been abused, and the things needed to rehabilitate it and the people who live upon it. Areas of badly eroded land are marked off, woodlands in good condition and bad are plotted, the existence or lack of schools, hospitals, and community centers is designated.

County Committees.

Recommendations for corrective action are drawn for the consideration of county planning committees which include besides farmers the representatives of public agencies of all kinds. Recommendations are discussed, some of them laid aside for later consideration, some of them amplified and scheduled for immediate action. County programs are drawn up to include the needs of the various local communities for consideration and action by state planning committees. State programs later are submitted for federal action at Washington.

Posthumous Award

The late John Rivenburg, 17-year-old Boy Scout of Creston, Iowa, has been posthumously awarded the first prize of $200 in a nationally conducted Girl Scout Song contest which recently closed. Young Rivenburg, a Scout of Eagle rank, died last December after an operation. He was the son of Dr. and Mrs. L. D. Rivenburg of Creston. His song, entitled "Scouts Are We," is a marching tune. Judges in the contest were Olin Downes, music critic of the New York Times; Sigmund Spaeth, radio's "tune detective," and Hugh Ross, director of the Schola Cantorum of New York. Mrs. Arthur O. Suggests Plans to Avert Shortage of Manganese

NEW YORK.—To avert a shortage of our No. 1 strategic material—manganese—a three-point program to encourage domestic and hemisphere production has been laid down in an article in the current issue of the magazine Chemical Industries.

The United States has relied chiefly on distant sources overseas, Langbourne M. Williams Jr., the author, points out. As president of poorest—is an example of land use planning to improve a difficult agricultural situation. Caswell is a typical "one-crop" part of the South faced with lost export markets, its soils seriously depleted. Sheep used to graze on the lawns of the plantation homes, blooded horses were in the paddocks, meat cattle and milk cows in the pastures, pigs enough to supply all the hog meat and fat needed in the county, game in the woods, fish in the streams.

Today, approximately two-thirds of the farm operators in Caswell county are tenants, most of them sharecroppers, trying to eke out a living on badly eroded land.

Caswell's "one crop" has been tobacco. After 76 years with this crop as virtually the only source of cash income, the farmers found themselves with a system of farming unable to withstand the shocks caused by depleted soil resources and fluctuating markets. The land use planning committees took hold, and now a better system of farming has been developed. The program calls for increased use of cover crops, the use of better farming equipment, greater use of lime and phosphate, the development of more home gardens, the use of more dairy cattle, land drainage, and erosion control.

Farm Loans.

Half a dozen or more public agencies are co-operating to put Caswell once more on the economic map. Through agricultural adjustment programs the farmers are being paid to conserve the land, to become more self-sufficient as to food supplies. Loans are made by the Farm Security administration through its tenant-purchase program to enable a limited number of responsible tenants to acquire farms of their own, and to equip these farms with modern implements. Modern housing and improved sanitation are being provided.

A few years from now, Caswell county will be very different—physically, economically, socially—from what it was in the dark days of the early 1930s. Already, striking changes have been wrought. The people on the land as well as the land itself are being rehabilitated. The people have rekindled hope in their hearts, they are playing an important part contributing to the welfare of the state and the nation.

There are many other examples of improvement the country over. Ward county, North Dakota, is one of co-operation in developing a long-range program to improve difficult and adverse conditions. Located in the central portion of the northern spring wheat area, Ward county has suffered from drought and from too great a reliance upon wheat as a single cash crop. This situation of a type of farming not entirely fitted to local conditions, together with high costs for public service in relation to a limited tax base, inequitable distribution of the tax burden, heavy tax delinquency, and a high proportion of tenancy were among the major problems which planning committees recognized.

Feed Reserves.

The planning committees in Ward county concluded it was desirable to shift to a more diversified type of farming through expanding the livestock enterprises, building up feed reserves, and a "live at home" type of farming. The farmers are building up livestock herds through natural increase rather than by purchases of additional animals. A program of building up feed reserves against possible droughts in the future is being followed. A tenant-purchase program is under way. The school system is being modernized. Local taxing authorities are trying to adjust tax systems according to the productive capacity of the land.

As a first step in dealing with the tax delinquency problem, the land use planning committee recommended to the county commissioners a plan of impounding rents on tax-delinquent lands. Approximately 500 legal actions were instituted in pursuance of this program, and the county is now collecting rentals on many additional items of real estate. Longer term leases better adapted to conditions in the different land use areas of the county are being made. Problems created by competition between small operators and the larger ones for available farm land are being attacked. Tax-forfeited lands are to be developed as open public recreation areas.

Madame Mayor

DOVER, N. C.—Down comes the curtain on woman rule in Dover! Today four ladies leave the stage of public life after a successful two-year run. The men are resuming command without opposition, just as the helm was turned over to the ladies at the last town election.

through aid obtained from the state highway commission, and a treasurer's report "all accounts paid."

Playing the leading role—that of mayor and judge—has been Anna Dixon Wilson, a buoyant grandmother. The neighborhood vouches for her good old Southern cooking, her flower culture, her business acumen, and her success as an insurance agent. With wisdom and great dispatch, she can hold court, then rush home to supervise its remodeling, and then back again to the business of running her town of 400.

"It's been a grand experience," she beamed. "We've had our ups and downs, but I've enjoyed it, and I do think we've accomplished something, although we don't take all the credit."

Essential to the success of Dover's feminine government (they detest "petticoat rule," even in jest) was Mrs. Sarah Griffin, the persistent tax collector.

"And a good one!" chimed in Mayor Anna Wilson.

"I'm just a family woman, but when they made me tax collector, I decided then and there we'd get those taxes collected," said Mrs. Griffin, speaking for herself. And she did, for the books she is turning over show all current and inherited bills have been paid and there's even a little in the treasury.

The folks there complained bitterly to Commander McDonald about their lack of natural resources. They said they had no coal or oil, had to import so many things.

"What would you do about it," McDonald asked them, "if you had a Niagara falls here?"

"Why, we would build a power plant that would make it unnecessary for us to import any coal or oil," they said.

"Don't you realize," said McDonald, "that in this constant trade wind which blows over your islands that you have more power than can be generated at Niagara falls?"

"But how can we utilize it?" they asked.

"Windmills," said the naval reserve officer, succinctly.

McDonald knows about windmills. Some years back, he began wondering how he could sell radios to farmers who wanted them, but had no electric current. The answer soon came. He hooked up with an inventor, and pretty soon they were selling little windmills and dynamos to farmers. The outfit could be sold, at a profit, retail for $15, though the farmer would have to buy his storage battery in addition. They had sold hundreds of thousands of these outfits to farmers before McDonald talked to the folks in Bermuda.

A PRACTICAL SERVANT

Knowing that this rediscovery of the windmill as a practical servant had been applied to a good many other purposes besides providing the power for a radio, a friend asked McDonald recently if this might not furnish the solution to the present electric power shortage.

Commander McDonald replied that the use of the windmill in this country as a source for electric power was not economically sound in large scale operations; though it was very satisfactory in small scale operations.

In war, however, and national emergencies bearing a striking resemblance to war conditions, sound economics is often thrown overboard. We are proposing to build pipe lines to take the place of tankers, as pointed out in a recent dispatch, though the tanker is a cheaper form of transporting oil.

TURBINE BOTTLENECK

So it occurs to lay observers that before this emergency and "power shortage" has gone much further we are likely to see more windmills in this country. One of the reasons is that there is a terrible bottleneck in turbines, which are of the essence in producing electric power from steam.

Many communities in this country, as recently as 40 years ago, were grinding their corn and doing other chores with windmills. This includes some of the southeastern section of the country now so seriously hampered by lack of sufficient power, due in part to the drought and in part to the necessity of giving the aluminum plants in that section every kilowatt they can use.

With the development of the gas engine most of these disappeared. Then came Rural Electrification. Now, in the Southeast, both oil and electricity must be conserved. Maybe the windmill is coming back!

Gasoline Shortage Due Late in 1941

The pinch of the gasoline shortage is expected by government officials in the third and fourth quarters of this year. Unfortunately, nothing that can be done in that length of time will be important in affecting the situation. It is not a question of production, it is merely a question of transportation.

Oddly enough it is the department of justice which is really responsible. Ever since the war broke out in Europe in the late summer of 1939 the oil men have been worrying about this very problem. They foresaw that there would be a terrific shortage of shipping if the war lasted long enough, and they knew tankers would rate pretty high among the classifications of ships desired.

They did not figure, as early as that, on the U. S. government taking their tankers away from them. Their thoughts were more selfish, if it is fair to put it that way. The point is they thought, with the torpedoing of so many ships throughout the world, and the necessity of getting oil and gasoline to Britain, that ocean freight rates would make any water carrier a big earner. Therefore they thought that it would turn out very profitably if they could be in a position by that time to sell their tankers to the British at a high price and haul the oil from the Gulf coast to the Atlantic seaboard in pipe lines.

NEW IDEAS

for Home-makers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HAVE you considered covering your out-of-door cushions with water-resistant artificial leather? It may be cut and sewn the same as any heavy fabric. The colors are all so fresh and gay that you will be inspired to try striking combinations. Use a coarse machine needle; a No. 5 hand needle; No. 20 or 24 sewing thread and regulate the machine to about 12 stitches to the inch.

The cushions shown here are green with seam cords covered in red. The sketch shows how they are made. The cotton seam cord should be about 1/4-inch in diameter. It is covered with a straight strip 1 1/4 inches wide stitched with the machine cording foot to allow the sewing to come up close to the cord. The raw edges of the cord covering are basted around the top and bottom of the cover on the right side, as shown, and are then stitched in with the seam.

If you like variety in your cushions, there is an idea for sturdy ones made of burlap and silk stockings on page 23 of SEWING, Book 5.

NOTE: Book 7, in the series of Home-makers' Booklets by Mrs. Spears, is the latest and contains directions for more than thirty things which you will want for your own home or for gifts. Included are working drawings for reconditioning old chairs and other furniture; directions for a spool whistler; an unusual braided rag rug; and many things to make with needle and thread. The seven booklets now available contain a total of more than two hundred of Mrs. Spears' NEW IDEAS for Homemakers. Booklets are 10 cents each. Send your order to:

THE SMOKY YEARS

INSTALLMENT 17 THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon had built up a vast string of ranches. King was killed by his powerful and unscrupulous competitor, Ben Thorpe. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, was determined to avenge his death in spite of the opposition by his sweetheart.

Jim Leathers, in spite of his warning to Kane, made no effort to move out of the light. Standing square in the door, he drew his gun. A bullet splintered into the casing beside him as the report of a carbine sounded from somewhere beyond. Jim Leathers fired twice; then stepped inside, closed and barred the heavy door.

For a moment the eyes of Kane and Leathers questioned each other. "Dry Camp Pierce," Kane said.

"Naturally."

"If it don't beat hell that they should land in at just this minute—"

Leathers was very cool and quiet now. Deliberately he pulled on his sheepskin. "Get out the back, untie the ponies and get your man aboard."

"Jim, seems like we stand a better chance here, way we are, than running in the open, what with—"

"They'll burn us out if we try to hold. Get going, you!"

Dragging Roper after him, Kane plunged into the dark of the back room. He swore as he rummaged for his rifle, his sheepskin.

Leathers neither swore nor hurried. Moving deliberately, he blew out one lamp, hobbled across the room to the other. Then all hell broke loose at once.

The single frosted pane of the ten-inch window at the end of the room smashed out with a brittle ring of falling glass. In the black aperture appeared the face of a boy, pale and wild-eyed, so young-looking that he might almost have been called a child. The heavy .44 with which he had smashed the window thrust through the broken pane; it blazed out heavily, twice.

Jim Leathers, staggering backwards as if he had been hit with a log ram, fired once, from the level of his belt. The face vanished, but a moment after it was gone the hand that held the gun dangled limp within the room. Then the gun thudded on the floor, and the lifeless hand disappeared.

As Leathers went down, a broken roar of guns broke out in the storeroom. Leathers groped for his gun, tried to rise, but could not.

Roper, who had been dragged into the dark storeroom by Red Kane, felt the swift sting of the wind as the back door was smashed open, and was able to tear free as the guns began. He stumbled over piled sacks, and flattened himself against the wall. The blind blasting in the dark of the back room lasted long enough for three guns to empty themselves. Their smashing voices fell silent with an odd suddenness, as suddenly as they had opened. In the dark a voice said, "In God's name let's have a light!"

After what seemed a long time a match flared uncertainly, and Roper's quick glance estimated the changed situation. In the back room now two men were down—Red Kane and another whom Roper immediately recognized as an old King-Gordon cowboy called Old Joe.

The dim flicker of the match was augmented to a steady glow as a lantern was found and lighted. Roper did not recognize the other man in the room—the cowboy who had lighted the lantern with one hand, his smoking six-gun still ready in the other.

The stranger stooped over Old Joe. "You hurt bad?"

"It's only my laig, my laig."

The other stepped over the inert body of Kane to the door, and surveyed the silent kitchen.

"Jim Leathers! Somebody got Jim Leathers, and got him hard!"

He stepped back into the rear room. "You're Bill Roper, aren't you? Where's the others?"

"There aren't any others. They all went out on Dry Camp's trail, after his raid day before yesterday."

"No others here? You sure?"

"Kane and Leathers are the only ones here."

Old Joe, both hands clasped on his smashed leg, spoke between set teeth. "Where's Jody? For God's sake find Jody!"

The King-Gordon cowboy whom Roper did not know, went out, his spurs ringing with his long strides.

"Jody isn't here," Roper told Old Joe disgustedly. "She got loose two days ago."

"The hell she isn't here! She come here with us!"

"With you? But you're from Gordon's Red Butte camp, aren't you? I thought Jody went to Miles City with Shoshone Wilce."

"She never went to Miles. She knew Leathers was bringing you here, from what she'd heard him say. She come to us, because we was the K-G camp nearest here, and she wouldn't hear of nothing but we come and try to crack you loose. Shoshone Wilce—he's daid."

Bill Roper was dazed. "I thought—I thought—"

The other cowboy now came tramping back into the cabin, an awkward burden in his arms; and this time Jody Gordon herself followed close upon his heels. Her face was set, and the sharp flush across her cheekbones did not conceal her fatigue.

Jody Gordon, and her father. After wiping Thorpe out of Texas, Roper conducted a great raid upon Thorpe's vast herds in Montana. Both Thorpe and Lew Gordon placed heavy rewards upon Roper's head. He was captured by Leathers and Kane, two of

Bill Roper started to say, "Jody, how on earth—"

Jody did not seem to see him; she appeared to be thinking only of the slim youngster whom the cowboy carried. The cowboy laid the limp figure on the floor of the kitchen, ripped off his own neckerchief and spread it over the youngster's face.

Jody Gordon methodically shut the door. Then she dropped to the floor beside the fallen youngster, lifted his head into her lap, and gave way to a violent sobbing. The high-keyed nervous excitement that had sustained her through the hard necessities of action was unstrung abruptly, now that her work was done; it left nothing behind it but a great weariness, and the bleak consciousness that this boy was dead because of her.

Roper and the King-Gordon cowboy stood uncertainly for a moment. Then the cowboy picked up Leathers where he lay struggling for breath, carried him into the back room and put him down on a bunk. For a moment he hesitated; then closed the door between the two rooms, leaving Jody alone.

"Seems like the kid got Jim Leathers; but Jim Leathers got the kid."

"Daid?" Old Joe asked.

"Deader'n hell! Jody takes it awful hard."

The cowboy cut loose Bill Roper's hands, and together they lifted Old

"Now you go and keep Miss Gordon company."

Joe onto the other bunk. Roper cut Marquita free.

"Get me that kettle of water off the stove," Bill Roper ordered Marquita; and when she had brought it he said, "Now you go and keep Miss Gordon company for a little while."

Old Joe kept talking to them in a gassy sort of way, as they did what they could for his wound.

"The kid was scared to death to come. Jody seen that, and tried to send him back, with some trumped-up message or something. Natural he seen through that and wouldn't go. Now most likely she blames herself that he's daid. Lucky for us that Leathers' main outfit wasn't here."

"You mean just you three was going to jump the whole Leathers outfit, and the Walk Lasham cowboys, too?"

"Not three—four," Old Joe said. "Don't ever figure that girl don't pull her weight. We been laying up here on the hill since before dusk. She aimed we should use the same stunt you used at Fork Crick—bust into 'em just before daylight. Then somebody fires off a gun down here, and she loses her haid, and we come on down. It was her smashed her horse against the door, trying to bust it in. She blindfolded him with her coat—threw it over his haid—and poured on whip and spur, and she bangs into the planks. Broke his neck, most like; can't see why she wasn't killed."

"Just you four," Roper marveled, "were going to tackle the whole works, not even knowing how many were here?"

"We tried to tell her it couldn't be done. But you can't talk any sense into a woman, once she gets a notion in her nut."

CHAPTER XXIII

Marquita, closing the door of the storeroom behind her, for some moments stood looking down at Jody Gordon.

Jody still sat on the floor, upon her lap the head of the boy who had Thorpe's men. Leathers' girl, Marquita, loved Roper. She made a desperate effort to save him but was soon overpowered. The men were dragging Roper outside to hang him when they heard the sound of running horses.

downed Jim Leathers. The sobs that convulsed her were dying off now, leaving her deeply fatigued, and profoundly shaken.

"You might as well get up now," Marquita said. Her soft Mexican slur gave an odd turn to the blunt American words she used. "The fight's over; and that boy you've got there is dead as a herring."

With a visible effort Jody Gordon pulled herself together, and gently lowered the head of the dead boy to the floor. She got up shakily, and for a moment looked at Marquita.

"Why did you come here?" Marquita asked at last. Her voice continued gently curious—nothing more.

"I knew Billy Roper was alive," Jody told her. "Because I was watching when Leathers left Fork Creek with him. I already knew they meant to take him to Ben Thorpe at Sundance, for the reward. That would be death, to him. And I knew they meant to stop over here on the way. So I got the boys, from our Red Butte camp, and I come on."

"You are a very foolish little girl," Marquita said. "Luck saved you; but if this camp had been full of men, it would have been suicide." "Wouldn't you have done the same?"

Marquita shrugged impatiently. "I feel very sorry for you," she said.

"Why?"

"Because I think you are in love with this Billy Roper."

"Why do you say that?"

"Es claro," Marquita said. "It is plain. And it's a pity; because this kind of man is not for you."

At first Jody Gordon did not answer. But behind the softness of Marquita's voice was a cogency as strange as her American words—a cogency that would not be ignored. Here Jody found herself facing a woman whom she could not possibly have understood. Marquita's careless, even reckless mode of life, her uncoded relationships with men—there was not an aspect of Marquita's life which did not deny every value of which Jody was aware. Marquita appeared to thrive and flower in a mode of life in which Jody incorrectly believed she herself would have died.

"I don't understand you."

Marquita's glance swept the room—the bare chinked walls, the dead boy. Her glance seemed to go beyond the door, where they were dressing Old Joe's wound; beyond the walls, to the cold wind-swept prairie, where men still rode this night, though morning was close.

"What do you know," she said—"what can you know of the lives of these men?"

Jody lifted her head, then, and looked at Marquita; and again the simple words and the mask-like face of Marquita seemed to have a meaning for which she groped. In the silence that followed, it came to Jody that the night's fighting was not yet over, that she must still fight for herself and for Bill—and somehow for that foolish house in Ogallala, with its tall tower overlooking the plain.

"Do you ride with them?" the gentle, inexorable voice went on. "Do you share their blankets? Do you ride under their ponchos in the rain? Where are you when their guns speak? Who prays for them at dawn, knees down in this God-forsaken snow?"

Marquita paused, and her body swung, lazily assured, across a shadowy angle of the room toward the closed door that had hid Roper, working now over the wounded men. The doorposts and it seemed to Jody, watching her, as if Marquita were a barrier between what might have been Jody's, and that she had lost now.

"You don't have to bar the door," she said.

Marquita's hands came away from the doorposts. "I know I don't."

The words were so indolently cadenced that they might have been spoken in Spanish. And at their soft assurance something awoke in Jody Gordon. Something was still worth fighting for. Perhaps it had nothing to do with Bill Roper, but it flowed deep into the roots of her life; deeper than her life with one man—with any man—could ever flow.

As Jody looked at Marquita, strange things came to her, that she herself could not have put into words. She knew that Marquita and all her kind would presently pass. Perhaps Bill Roper, like all the rest of his bold riders, must also pass; but now suddenly Jody knew that whatever else might vanish from this prairie, what she herself stood for would remain. When she spoke at last, she scarcely recognized her own voice. "I guess I was wrong," she said. Her words had a strange echo of Marquita's own directness. "You're Bill Roper's girl—is that what you wanted to tell me?"

The dance hall girl's words fell softly. "Si, that is what I wanted you to know."

THE GOSPEL IS TAKEN INTO EUROPE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:6-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Come over into Macedonia and help us.—Acts 16:9.

America is coming to the fore in the thinking of a confused world as the final hope of democracy and religious freedom. Europe, or at least most of Europe, represents in our thinking dictatorship, a totalitarian disregard for the personal rights of man, including his freedom to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience.

It is therefore very appropriate that on this "Fourth of July" Sunday, when patriotism has been much in our thoughts, that we remind ourselves in the study of our Sunday school lesson that the roots of American life, both cultural and religious, reach back into the European soil on which our forefathers dwelt. Much of that which we as Christians count precious has come to us because Paul, the missionary, was responsive to the leading of the Holy Spirit and carried the gospel into the heathendom of Europe, from whence, in due time, it came to our own land.

It was a crucial point in the history of Christianity; yes, and of the world, when the gospel came to Europe.

I. By Providential Hindrance (vv. 6-8).

Not only are "the steps of a good man ordered by the Lord" (Ps. 37:23), but his steps as well. That is not an easy lesson to learn. Let us remember that we may be as much in the will of the Lord when all our efforts are thwarted as when they prosper.

Paul had set out on a second journey to carry out a follow-up campaign in the cities where he had already preached. This was a good plan and had God's blessing (see v. 5). But soon we find that word "forbidden" (v. 6) and then "suffered not" (v. 7). The Holy Spirit began to close doors to the gospel preacher. Now what? Shall he go on in determined self-will? Or shall he become discouraged and embittered in his soul? No, let him wait, for God is guiding him by providential hindrance, which is soon to be followed.

II. By Divine Guidance (vv. 9, 10).

The Spirit spoke to Paul in a vision, revealing the divine purpose that the gospel should go over into Macedonia. The Spirit leads in our day, possibly not by visions, but by impelling inward prompting complemented and checked by the teaching of Scripture and by providential circumstances, and thus a man may know what is the will of God for him.

A word of caution is needed at this point. Some earnest Christian people go astray by projecting their own desires and purposes into the place where they seem to be the will of God, and thus do themselves and others, and Christianity itself, much harm. The three things should agree—(1) the inner prompting of the Spirit, (2) the teaching of God's Word, and (3) God's hand in our outward circumstances.

If these three do not agree, the Christian does well to wait, prayerfully, expectantly, for the Lord's further guidance.

III. Through a Faithful Witness (vv. 11-14a).

The gospel came to Europe because Paul and his fellow workers were faithful to their calling. When God led, they went to Macedonia (vv. 11, 12), where they sought out those who were in the place of prayer (v. 13). Paul spoke to them about Christ (v. 14). There he met the man of Macedonia who turned out to be a woman. For some reason the men were absent from the place of prayer on that all-important Sabbath morning. They were undoubtedly the ancient counterpart of our present day men who are "brothers-in-law" to the church, these foolish men who seem to assume that a bit of "religion" second hand through the wife or children will suffice.

IV. Through a Receptive Heart (vv. 14b-15).

God sent an obedient messenger to the place where He had a prepared heart. Lydia was a woman of distinction, business ability, and high moral character. But she knew, and Paul knew, that even good people need to be saved. We do well to keep that fact before us.

Paul spoke the truth of God, who opened Lydia's heart. Observe that she not only received the Word of God into her own heart, but at once gave herself to the task of passing it on. The first thing she could do was to give aid and comfort to the messenger of the truth, and she did that at once. Be assured that from that day on she did all she could to prosper the gospel on its way through Europe and to the ends of the earth. Have we done likewise?

Fair and Warm—Or Hot—For Summer

Pretty Dorothy Wenzel, 19 year old singing and dancing star, demonstrates the great size of the 1941 Frigidaire electric range—which also compares favorably with her trim beauty. The new range, with specially styled exterior, is fit to grace a princess's kitchen. It also has five practical cooking speeds in the new, exclusive radiant tube heating elements. That means your summer-time kitchen can be kept hot or cool—by using just the amount of heat to do the right cooking job.

MOKENA

The Geuther family reunion was held Sunday in Earlville, Ill., with about 100 members present. It was voted to hold next year's reunion in the Frankfort Grove. This family has been holding a reunion each year for quite a number of years back. The early pioneer members of the family came here in about 1845.

The residents of Mokena thought there was a fire Tuesday afternoon when the fire siren sounded and again Wednesday morning. This however was only a signal that the village water supply was being shut off for a few hours to allow work on the water mains to proceed.

The Robert O. Geuther family left on a vacation trip through the Smoky Mountain region Tuesday morning. They expect to be away for about a week or more.

The Joseph Doyle family have gone on a vacation trip.

A meeting of the Mokena Business men was held Monday night in the Cooper & Hostert garage to pass on the lease with the Rock Island railroad for the use of the railroad lot adjoining the depot for showing of the outdoor free movies each week.

A number of Mokena people attended the funeral services for Robert Marks held in the Hirsch Chapel in Tinley Park Tuesday afternoon.

During a heavy wind storm Monday evening a big tree was blown down across the street in front of the George Koeller place in the west end of the village.

The Cooper & Hostert wrecker was used to remove the tree.

Mokena was partly without electricity Monday night. Residences in the east end on Main street were in the dark while the rest of the town had light. The Public Service repaired the trouble later in the evening.

The Roy Castle family who have been occupying the living quarters adjoining the barbershop have moved to Joliet.

The Public Service pay station and bulb supply has been placed in the Werner Hardware store.

Mr. and Mrs. George Koeller recently enjoyed a 5,000 mile automobile vacation trip thruout various sections of the country.

Fletcher Hill has resumed charge of the Mokena Gospel Mission in the Hatch Hall following a brief vacation spent in the southern part of the state.

Richard Hensel attended the funeral services of his cousin, Mr. Merz in Chicago last week. Mr. Merz was a veteran druggist.

The Mokena Volunteer Fire Department will enter their fire truck in the parade of the Orland Park Vol. Fire Department to be held in connection with their picnic in Orland on July 20.

Herman Schweser and helpers have been kept pretty busy cutting weeds and thistles along state aid roads in this vicinity.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Christian Science" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 29.

The Golden Text was, "The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God" (Isaiah 52: 10).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord" (Jeremiah 31: 31, 34).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christian Science reveals incontrovertibly that Mind is All-in-all, that the only realities are the divine Mind and idea. This great fact is not, however, seen to be supported by sensible evidence, until its divine Principle is demonstrated by healing the sick and thus proved absolute and divine. This proof once seen, no other conclusion can be reached" (p. 109).

NIGHT AIR COOLING SYSTEM

Pulls in Nature's cool night air as it flushes out hot, sticky air... Provides an entire night of restful sleep for less than the cost of an ice cream cone.

Why should your house be like a "bake-oven"—when all around you, waiting to be put to use, is Nature's cool, fresh night air. Harness that air—bring it into your home—and you'll keep cool and comfortable during even hottest weather. A night air cooling system is one of the simplest home cooling methods ever devised. And it is also one of the most effective. Powerful, slow-speed fans with extraordinary air displacement qualities are available for all types and sizes of houses. Portable models may be used in the attic or in individual rooms. Built-in models are designed for use in attic windows or ventilators, and can be easily installed.

Here is a wise investment that pays big dividends in cool nights of restful sleep. Investigate it now—enjoy it all summer long, for years to come.

... and Electricity is cheap!

A COMPLETE CHANGE OF AIR—IN 3 MINUTES OR LESS!

At sundown, open the downstairs windows and turn on the attic fan.

As the powerful fan pulls in cool night air, stale hot air is expelled.

In 3 minutes or less, the air in every room has been completely changed.

One of the Most Popular Markets In This Section And They Feature Choice Cuts Of Quality Meats—Here You Can Always Secure Just The Cut That You Want—Have Perfect Sanitary And Modern Refrigeration And Equipment—Under the Able Direction Of Buehler Bros.

Buehler Bros., Inc., of Chicago Heights enjoy a large trade from all over the surrounding territory as their reputation for choice meats has spread far and wide.

The preparation of meat for the table has been one of the disputed subjects from time immemorial but not until the present day has the public had the privilege of eating meats so ably prepared as they are today. The butchers are expert meat cutters and thoroughly understand how the animals should be cut so that you get exactly what you want. If you want a roast, steak or boiling piece you will find that here they will see that you get the very best.

In addition to the fresh meats they carry smoked meats, ham, bacon, lard and all the meat specialties that are very tasty. These all are prepared at the store or purchased from specialists in these lines who make goods that are prime.

We are pleased to compliment Buehler Bros. Inc., Meat Market upon the high position occupied in the home life of this part of the state and would refer their excellent meats to the people and suggest that everyone occasionally should stop at these markets and do a little shopping.

FREDERIC H. BECK, ARCHITECT

RECOGNIZED FOR REMARKABLE SERVICE IN DESIGNING OF INDUSTRIAL BUILDINGS & SUPERIOR PLANNING OF HOMES

Erection of a building today is not the intricate undertaking of a few years ago and the hazards of mistakes and future regrets can be eliminated almost in their entirety with good architectural service. In fact, today's builder, contemplating a modest or spacious home, or a business structure, saves many times over in material, labor, and later on corrections with the service at the very outstart of a good architect.

A man outstanding in architectural ability, and who has rendered conspicuously worthy service, in every line of the profession, is that of Mr. Frederic H. Beck, architect, whose offices are located in Harvey at 182 E. 154th St., Phone 662.

Mr. Beck plans homes and buildings according to Twentieth Century needs, and is equipped in the necessary knowledge of the sciences, mechanical, social and economic. The architectural service rendered by this office will prevent the costly and regrettable errors so frequently occasioned in acoustics, heating, ventilation, air conditioning, insulation, lighting and sanitation. Using this service prevents boredom of repetition in style, although he remains aloof of the ornamental traditional, and even modern gadgets that within a few years ruin appearance and property value.

Utility in planning and building is the foremost in this service and decoration comes second. It can truthfully be stated that Mr. Beck follows the established precept, that the greater the work of art the less there is useless about it.

To save money in any building project, it is well to first consult a good architect. People in this community cannot go wrong using the munity cannot go wrong using the

There is no obligation incurred if you call at his office or write him about your contemplated plans. You will find that he is exceptionally capable and will save you money in any building project regardless of size. This service is just as adequate in modernizing as in new buildings. Transforming to new use old houses, almost unlivable, as far as comfort and convenience is concerned, is another highlight in this service. Mr. Beck is well known in this section of Illinois.

You will find it at this garage. They know that the delays caused from flat tires, ignition and electrical troubles almost invariably occur unexpectedly and when you are in a hurry. For that reason they have specialized in this work and they are equipped to take care of your needs in this line. You will also find that they have used good judgment in the selection of merchandise they have to sell and carry a complete stock of tires and tubes. Their place is modern and up-to-date and they give you expert merchandise service.

E R A THEATRE

Mr. E. R. Austerlode, Manager 15406 Lexington Ave. Harvey Tel. 535

There is nothing which adds so greatly to the progress of the community as does these "live-wire" theatres. They not only bring the world's greatest stars here to entertain us, but they bring added business activity and thus benefit the entire community. They should have the most liberal patronage of the entire people

In this day of high cost of living the management of this theatre has never lowered the standard, but insists the best is none too good for the people of this part of the country.

While the class of production that they show costs a little more than the ordinary kind, yet they have refused to lower their standards.

The people of the rural communities, when tired of the toil of the day, can find no more pleasure than an evening's entertainment at these popular theatres. A few minutes drive to town for an interesting photoplay will make one more fit for another day's work.

We refer this high class theatre to all our readers as one worthy of their patronage in this business review of Harvey.

Since our earliest known era, bread has been an important part of human food and in recent years physicians have endorsed it as a food of extreme value because of the high content of protein and carbohydrates which it possesses. Both of these elements are essential to the health and well being of the human body, and both are obtained from wheat.

Emily's Bake Shop has kept pace with the baking business in both equipment and methods. The managers and owners make every effort to supply their customers with a product made under the most sanitary conditions possible. Their bread is made from the best and richest of flour, shortening and other ingredients, and contains a high content of milk. The bakers are also experts in the production of light rolls, of all kinds, which are baked daily and are distinctive in both quality, and taste. They carefully maintain the high standard of their products regardless of cost of materials.

Emily's Bake Shop is always open to public inspection. Their business success can be traced directly to the reputation their products enjoy with the public. If you are not already a confirmed user of their baking, a trial will convince you of its high quality. Emily's Cakes are particularly popular, not only with local people but with out of town customers in the territory adjacent to Harvey.

Since the beginning of history and notably in the olden days in Egypt we read of the various plagues and pests of insects that came over the country to plague the people. This has been especially true of the warmer climates, yet no part of the country is free from them. This section has its particular set that occasionally multiplies in great numbers and becomes a public nuisance.

This company has made a scientific study of the various methods of extermination. They have made practical tests and after much study and research have brought guaranteed relief to the people. They will instantly destroy pests and leave no ill effects around the premises. The secret of the method is only known to them and the fact that it has proved to be such a wonder makes the formula more valuable.

They manufacture the formula on a large scale and the price is merely nominal considering how far it will go and the good results produced. If there are any of the insects, rats or mice in your neighborhood just them a line or phone and they will give you complete information as to cost, methods of use and all other data.

In making this 1941 review we are glad to call the attention of the people to the Harvey Exterminating Co., and recommend them to all our readers.

The Adding Machine and Typewriter sales is meeting with success and is aiding in speeding up our industrial life.

There is no institution that is of greater value to the community than this.

Three of the most necessary attributes of our present day life are accuracy, efficiency and speed and these attributes the typewriter brings to you. The typewriter is absolutely essential to both the home and office as in writing of both personal and business letters it is a great time saver. A letter can be typewritten in half the time that it can be written in long hand even when tyro hands are operating the keyboard and to the recipient the time saved is even greater as the typewritten sheet presents a clear, neat picture of the ideas the writer wishes to convey and no wild guesses need be hazarded as to the identity of any weird looking hieroglyphics which often resemble letters of the alphabet only in the writer's fond imagination. They are now showing the latest in portable typewriters. These are now considered a necessity to the school and college student of today.

Mr. Cook also features adding machines and calculators both new and rebuilt. No difference whether you want a new or rebuilt typewriter or adding machine, they will sell, exchange, or rent you what you need. This makes it easy for everyone to have the service. They also sell on deferred payments.

Their repair service on typewriters and adding machines is efficient and rapid and you need never be out of service as they will loan you a machine while making repairs.

In making this 1941 Review we are pleased to compliment The Cook's Office Equipment Store on the part they are playing in the business life of this part of the state and would refer their services to all of our readers.

The Home Roofing Co., conduct one of the leading roofing companies in this section of the state and their excellent roofings have met with the commendation of everyone.

Barrett Roofs are a protection to any home from fires which often start on roofs and never end until your house is in ruins. Many persons today have suffered the loss of their barns and homes which could have been saved through a fireproof roof. Their excellent roofing can be laid over the old shingles which will keep your house or barn warm in the winter and cool in summer. In this way the added beauty serves many purposes and at a very low cost.

It is firesafe, rainproof and guaranteed permanent and most economical and will make your home brighter and give you added protection besides the fact that when you reroof with their roofing you have forever ended your cares and worries of leaky roofs. The heavy rains are sealed outside forever with never a chance for them to again leak through and ruin your ceilings and walls.

They will be glad to give anyone an estimate on any roofing work and assist in making up the plans for roofs suitable for any style of architecture.

In this review we take great pleasure in recommending The Home Roofing Co., and suggest to our many readers that you see Mr. Zanelli if you are having worries over a leaky roof. THE BRIDE LEARNS TO COOK
(See Recipes Below.)

EASY AS PIE

No sooner are you back from your honeymoon than the business of planning menus, marketing and cooking for two begins!

In your capacity as chief cook, you're sure to find the task of preparing three meals a day a real challenge. Of course if you've had little past experience in the culinary field, there'll undoubtedly be at least one batch of "heavy" biscuits, a "fallen" cake or two, and even burnt toast . . . but don't let mistakes bother you too much . . . and he'll soon be "crowing" about your So-o-o Good Meals!

Because I'm convinced that the ability to make really good pie is a highly desirable quality for any young woman to possess, especially a new wife, I'm presenting a few pie recipes for you to try in your leisure moments.

If he likes desserts at all (most men adore them), try your luck with lemon-chiffon, chocolate, rhubarb or even Spanish cream pie . . . And, if you're careful to follow the foregoing suggestions, he won't be able to resist that second piece!

I've captioned the column Easy As Pie . . . which perhaps gives an erroneous impression. Easy to eat, yes, but not always easy to make. Pastry is tricky, but once the technique of making it has been acquired, it isn't easily lost.

In making pastry remember these points: (1) unless you are making hot water pastry, have the ingredients for making pie crust cold; (2) cut shortening into the flour, using a pastry blender or fork; or, if you're an experienced cook, and work quickly, blending in the shortening with fingers is permissible; (3) add water sparingly, using only enough to hold the ingredients together; handle dough as little and as lightly as possible after adding water; (4) roll out the dough on a lightly floured board or on a heavy canvas; (5) cover the rolling pin with a child's white cotton stocking—with the foot cut off—and flour it lightly; and (6) place the dough loosely in the pan to help prevent shrinking.

Plain Pastry.

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup shortening
Ice water (about 6 or 7 tablespoons)
Sift flour once before measuring. Sift together flour and salt. Cut in shortening with two knives or pastry blender, making coarse pieces. Add as little water as possible to make dough stay together. Divide into parts large enough to make one crust and roll out on a well-floured board with as little handling as possible.

*Chocolate Pie.

Plain pastry
2 squares unsweetened chocolate
3 eggs
1 cup cream
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons soft bread crumbs
½ cup chopped walnuts
Line a pie pan with plain pastry and pinch with fingers to make a

I want to pass on to you newly-weds some tips for homemaking that have the approval of hundreds of cooks, mothers and housewives . . .

Tin or aluminum frying pans will wear better if cold water is not poured into them while they're hot.

Boiling a new rope clothes line for a few minutes in soapy water softens it and lengthens its life. A round whisk broom serves as an excellent clothes sprinkler. It gives a fine spray, sprinkles evenly, and saves time.

Grease spots may sometimes be removed from wallpaper with a piece of blotting paper held against the spots with a warm iron.

In planning meals, bacon should be considered as fat rather than meat, because it contains so little protein.

fancy edge. Cut chocolate in pieces and melt over hot water. Beat eggs well, and add sugar, bread crumbs and melted chocolate. Mix well. Pour into the pie pan. Bake in a hot oven (375 degrees F.) for 20 minutes, or until filling is firm. When cold, sprinkle with chopped nuts. Spread with whipped cream and decorate with whole walnut kernels.

Just because it's summer, don't stop pie baking . . . merely change the kind of pie you serve. Spanish Cream pie has everything for a successful summer dessert—it's quivery, cool, delicately flavored.

To make the filling and pastry really boon companions, substitute orange juice for the water in the pastry. A half teaspoon of grated orange rind added to the flour for the pastry will give a special fragrance to it.

Spanish Cream Pie.

1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold milk
1½ cups scalded milk
2 egg yolks
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 egg whites
1 baked pastry shell
Soften the gelatin in the cold milk 5 to 10 minutes. Dissolve over hot water, stirring constantly. Meanwhile, prepare a soft custard of the scalded milk, yolks, sugar and salt. Combine hot custard and hot dissolved gelatin. Cool slightly, add vanilla, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Chill until quite syrupy. Pour into pastry shell. Let set before serving. Yield: 6 servings.

Sometimes it is fun to change the flavor of pastry by adding an extra ingredient or two to the recipe. Cheese pastry, for example, is wonderful for apple pie. Grated cheese is mixed with the flour. A half cup of grated yellow cheese is enough for the standard recipe.

Spiced pastry is excellent for fruit pies, particularly peach, apple and apricot. Cinnamon and nutmeg, and perhaps a touch of cloves, are the spices to use. A teaspoon each of sugar and cinnamon and a fourth teaspoon of cloves will spice a batch of pastry. A little sugar also may be added.

Crumb Pastry.

2 cups crumbs, rolled fine or ground
½ cup melted butter
Blend butter and crumbs. Line pie pan by firmly pressing in mixture about one-fourth inch thick. Be sure to have it extra thick where sides of pan join. Bake in a 375- to 400-degree oven for 10 minutes. This pastry may be made of graham crackers, vanilla or chocolate wafers or ginger snaps.

And last but not least here's a recipe for the pie that still leads other meal sign-offs by a wide margin.

Apple Pie.

4½ cups apples
¼ teaspoon nutmeg or cinnamon
1 teaspoon butter
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
Line plate with pastry. Pare, core and slice apples. Mix sugar, salt and spice; put part of sugar in bottom of plate filled with apples. Cover with remaining sugar. Dot over top with bits of butter.

Moisten edges of lower crusts; put on upper crust and press edges firmly together. Place pie on bottom shelf or rack in oven and bake in hot oven, 450 degrees F., for 10 minutes, then reduce heat to 325 degrees and bake until fruit is tender and juice begins to boil through perforations in crust.

What to Do For Relief Of Fatigue

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THE drug, benzedrine sulfate, is being used by some students to "brighten them up" during the writing of examinations. It is also being used to relieve tiredness or fatigue in those who find they must be bright and alert for some special occasion.

Now, we all get tired at times and the best way to relieve fatigue and get back our energy is to lie down and rest when this is possible. The taking of a drug to "pep us up" should not be done as a regular thing. Anything that peeps us up and gives us false energy must be paid for later because Nature pays all her debts.

The tiredness or fatigue that some individuals feel at 11 o'clock in the morning is not due to any hard physical or mental work but to eating a "small" breakfast, because they have no appetite in the morning or do not get up early enough to have time to sit down to a proper breakfast. This same "hurry" prevents them from taking time to establish a regular bowel or intestinal habit. They are thus in a constipated condition with large amount of waste constantly lying in the lower bowel. This large amount of waste constantly presses against the little nerve endings of the bowel causing tiredness in the brain.

Others feel tired at four o'clock in the afternoon because they eat a very light lunch. It is lack of food which causes the tired feeling.

Benefit of Small Meals.

Drs. Haggard and Greenburg of Yale were able to prove that the same amount of food given in five servings instead of three prevented the midmorning and midafternoon fatigue. Workers were able to do 15 per cent more work by simply eating "part" of their lunch at 10:30 a. m. and part of their evening meal at 4 p. m.

The thought, then, is that when we feel tired, instead of taking medicine to stimulate us, we should rest, lie down if possible. If unable to rest, then eating a little food—candy, banana, orange, some crackers—should give us relief from fatigue.

We should not be ashamed to lie down and rest for five to fifteen minutes any time we feel tired.

Use of Insulin

To Prevent Itching

THE reason that insulin is proving so helpful is that the various glands of the body depend upon one another to some extent for their best work or use in the body. Therefore if one gland is not working properly, not producing enough of the right kind of juice, some of the other organs and tissues are going to suffer. And so we find that a lack of insulin in the blood, by upsetting the work of other glands and their juices, allows certain ailments and symptoms to occur.

One of the mean or distressing symptoms common to man is pruritis—itching. It is known that insects and parasites cause itching and also the eating of certain foods and the use of certain drugs. There are, however, many cases of pruritis where the cause is difficult to find.

Dr. C. G. Vervloet, Amsterdam, in investigating the use of insulin in pruritis, observed that several patients with hepatic (liver) disease in whom insulin gave good results, were relieved also of the severe itching of the skin. He found that twice 10 units, or twice 15 units, to which sugar was added, was usually sufficient to relieve the itching.

How was the itching relieved by insulin? Dr. Vervloet believes that the insulin relieved the itching because of its effect upon the liver and kidneys. As you know, the liver and kidneys are the great filters of the body, removing from the blood materials which, if left in the blood, could cause chronic illness or death. When the liver and kidneys are not getting the normal amount of insulin from the pancreas to help them to filter out harmful substances, they allow enough of these harmful substances to remain in the blood to cause pruritis or itching. By receiving insulin daily, the cells of the liver and kidneys do a better job of filtering the blood.

WHAT! NO NEW AUTO MODELS?
There is talk of discontinuing any changes in automobile models during this year, but the decision should not be made except as a last resort. Few things will break down the morale of the people more than a sudden suspension of their ancient right to trek down to the annual auto show and see how many gadgets have been shifted.

There is a limit to sacrifice. And it may be reached when you ask Americans to go through a whole year in which even the windows in automobiles open the same way they did before.

You can get Gus Q. Citizen to give up many things in a crisis without a squawk. He will give up meat, cut down on fuel, and if necessary climb into a uniform to defend his country, but when you ask him to take calmly the news that Detroit will turn out sedans with the humps and bulges unchanged, you're taking a chance on insurrection.

Elmer Twitchell is among those horrified by the prospect and he has written the following appeal to the President:

"Dear Franklin:

"If you want the morale of America kept intact, do something at once to stop this idea of no changes in auto models during the emergency. Year after year, through floods, fires, dust storms, quakes, strikes, erosions and depressions, no matter what happened to the country, automobile models came out every season full of changes. The more trouble, the more changes. And the people of America are not going to feel that everything is all right if cars come out next fall with the starting button right where it is today, and with the gear shift not lowered, raised, hidden or camouflaged in any way.

"I think I could stand news of an American reverse in battle better than I could endure the sudden realization that the ash trays in our limousines were to be left as in the 1941 models, and that nobody had decided on a new type of bumper.

"Franklin, if we are to come through this great crisis okay, don't prevent those auto makers from monkeying with the gadgets, color schemes and front ends. It's little things like that that undermine confidence, kill causes and lose wars.

"Of course I want the auto industry to concentrate on defense, but it must make a few changes in the limousine and roadster models if we are to remain a happy people. See that the least they do is to keep shifting the doorknobs.

"Yours for unity and a harder search for the starting button every season,

—Elmer Twitchell."

And we think Elmer is right. If the President doesn't do something, congress should.
